✓ The tyatkovskaya gallery
During my trip to Moscow I visited numerous museums and galleries and restaurants but my favourite one would be The tyatkovskaya gallery.

gr
This place was founded by a rich trader, whose name was Pavel Tyatkov back in 1856. Pavel was very interested in money and so he started buying paintings. He always had an option of receiving them to other people to make more money, but he decided to open a whole gallery ~~it~~ and named it after his surname. It is located at Lavre shinsky to which is not far from the centre.

The gallery is famous for its imaging ex and other great Russian painters. The place contains more than a thousand paintings of different authors, some of the paintings date back to 18-th century, which is very surprising, considering their perfect condition.

Personally, I like this place because of its history and cultural value.
